Words of Remembrance

Levi spent his short life living by his own rules, pursuing his passions, and chasing the wind. He was a gentle giant and a constant source of love, laughter, comfort, and protection for his family and friends. His laugh was enough to brighten even the darkest of days. Levi was selfless in nature and always quick to give a calming hug, provide a shoulder to cry on, or lend a helping hand wherever and whenever they were needed. He loved hunting with his dad and brothers, fishing with as many people as could fit on the boat, and music; he had it in his soul from the time he could stand well enough to dance. By the age of 13, Levi was drumming for bands and playing gigs; by the age of 23 had recorded an album and released a music video. He went out like a legend – way too young, still in his prime, loved by nearly everyone who had the good fortune of meeting him, and with more questions than answers regarding his demise. He will forever be adored and missed by all those lucky enough to have loved him.
