Words of Remembrance

Paul Joseph Doke was the kind of father, son, brother and friend that enriched every person's life that he touched. He was a man his family saw as a hero. He held his hand out for every person he could, even at a personal loss. He was brave. He held his head high in the face of adversity and stood for his cause regardless of stigmas and prejudice.

He was kind. He gave despite the little he had, always, in hopes that someone else could live better. He spoke only good words and cared for everyone. He was gentle and loving. He held his granddaughters reverently, hugged his children heartily and reminded everyone how much he loved them. He was and will remain in our hearts and minds.
